

Your object today is our heritage tomorrow

- Irene Constandse

Tell me and I'll forget Show me and I may remember Involve me and I'll understand

Visitors as active participants in museums

Museums need to adapt

- Dramatic storyline(s) in the exhibition (stories)
- Passive, active, interactive spaces (rhythm)
- Layered information for different types of visitors
- Information that is relevant to people's lives and experiences
- Group and individual (inter)activities

Examples

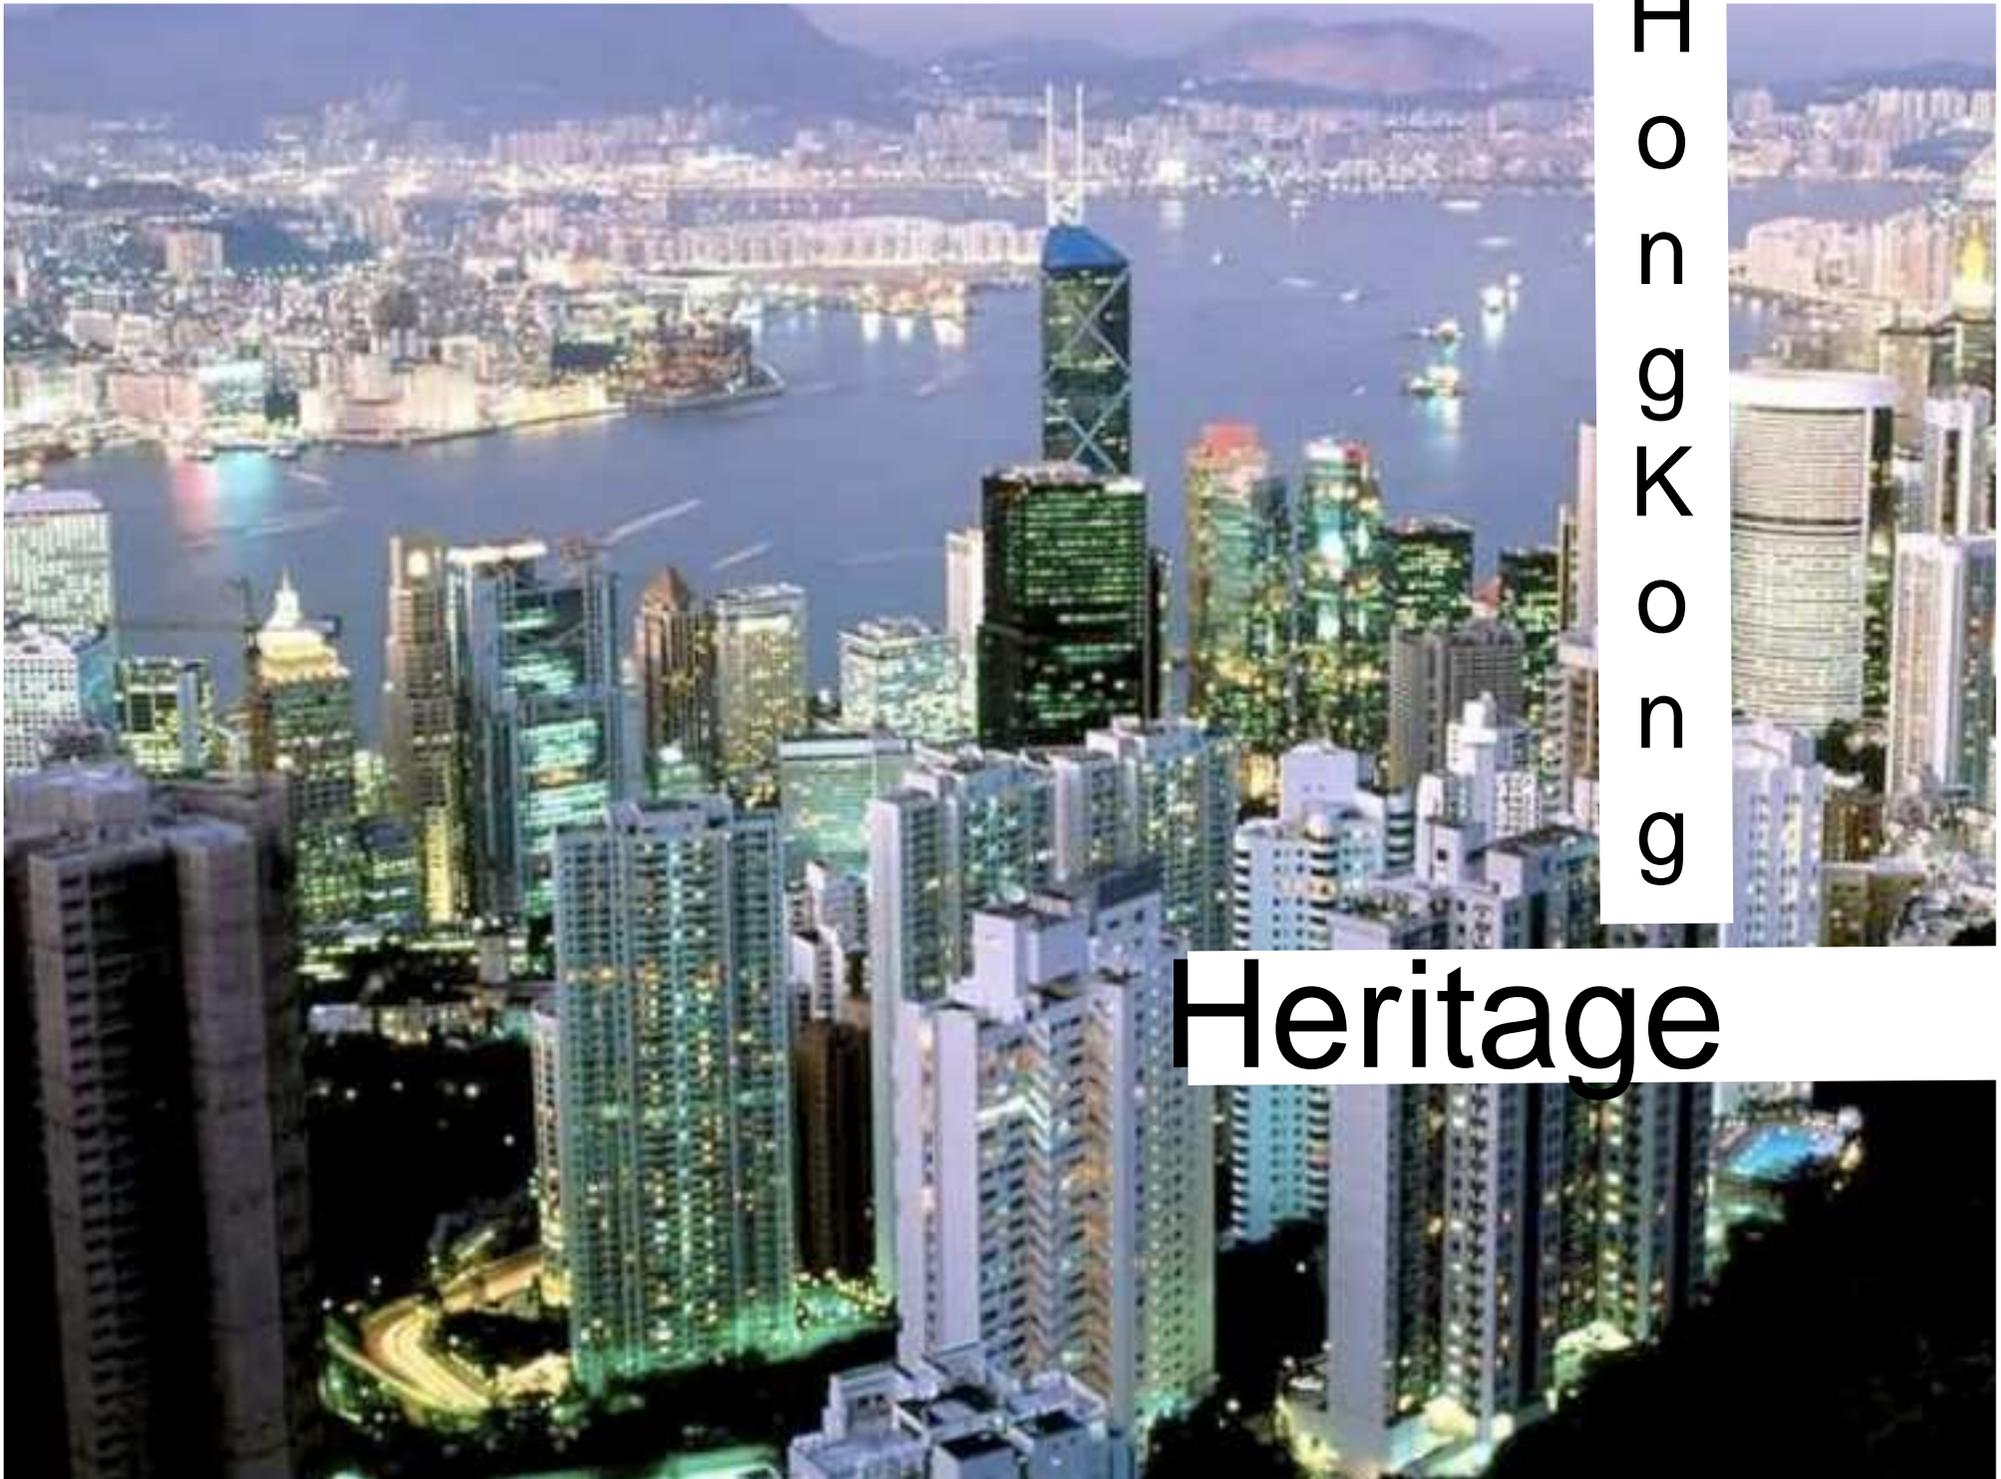

1. Tangible and intangible heritage in history museums
(Hong Kong Heritage Centre, Museum for the Social History of Liverpool, The Bunker)
2. Art museums (Stedelijk Museum Schiedam)
3. Archives
(Het Utrechts Archief, Media Experience)

With time to understand the past, there is wisdom.
Learn with your eyes to watch things
to go.
The past of your heritage and the old will be part of your heritage.
But we'll never again in the exhibition.

- ① Geen scheiding
- ② Scheiding van tafel en bed
- ③ Echte scheiding

GESCHIEDEN

Deze mensen mochten van de rechter scheiden!

Maar tot aan de jaren zestig van de vorige eeuw was dit helemaal niet zo gemakkelijk als nu.

Keypoints for documentation

Objects have different stories to tell

The truth is stranger and stronger than fiction

Make a storm in a teacup

- Little stories can be as important as big stories
- Visitors will not easily forget unexpected, surprising stories and facts

Think differently

- The main goal of museums is to present and conserve objects
- Stories (text, multimedia) should be connected to objects in the collection
- Databases should be able to give different types of information

Museums as centres of information?

- People search for information they can trust
